Aims and methodology of the seminar

In the framework of Euro-Med youth co-operation this seminar aims at looking into the particular role of research in the development of youth policy in order to develop a process of exchange, mutual cooperation and joint actions between the fields of youth research, youth work and youth policy development in the broader Euro-Med context.

Objectives

- To identify strategic partnerships concerning youth research in the field of youth policy development in view of improved cooperation in the broader Euro–Med context.
- To promote possibilities for closer interaction between youth policy, youth research and youth work within the Euro–Med Youth programme and the Partnership.
- To identify priorities and proposals for further development of youth policy cooperation in the broader Euro–Med context.
- To develop knowledge about the living conditions of young people in the Euro–Med area and the connections between research, policy and youth work
- To learn more about the research on youth: status, priorities, methodology, approaches, conceptual frameworks.
- To promote a stronger involvement of the civil society and the research world in the youth field.
- To learn about the role of religion, political philosophy, culture, and social stratifications in the Euro–Med context in view of increased Intercultural learning and dialogue among professionals and practitioners in the youth and research fields
- To develop a down to earth approach to research as a learning process between young people subject to research and researchers.
- To strengthen the process of Euro–Med cooperation in the youth policy field, leading to a foreseen high level conference in 2008.

Methodological considerations

The seminar brings together civil servants, youth researchers and representatives from civil society/youth organisations and youth workers as an expression of the “optimal” integrated approach to a needs–based youth policy. Furthermore, the seminar should bring together a balanced number of participants from Mediterranean/Arab and from Europe countries.

The focus of the work/discussions will be the living conditions of young people in the Euro–Med region. This should apply, notably, to the in–depth work of the Working Groups. These Working Groups will remain the same throughout the seminar so as to allow for in–depth work and better communication.

Each working group shall discuss the following questions within their thematic focus:

- To identify the key issues and objectives for youth research and youth policy;
- To discuss the (added) value for international youth cooperation in that field;
- To make proposals for follow–up work on that subject;
- To discuss the role of youth research in (youth) policy definition (topic–focussed);
- To discuss the role of youth work and civil society (youth organisations) in relation to the topic.
