The Office of the Ombudsman for Children

The Ombudsman for Children in Iceland is appointed by the Prime Minister to a period of five years. In his/her work, the Ombudsman for Children is independent and not subject to instructions from the authorities.

What is the role of the Ombudsman for Children?

The role of the Ombudsman for Children is to further the wellbeing of children and to look after their interests, rights and needs vis-à-vis public as well as private parties in all walks of life. The Ombudsman for Children is expected to be a protector of all children up to the age of 18.

Scope of the Ombudsman for Children

The Ombudsman for Children shall seek to ensure that, in their dealings, public authorities, central and local alike, individuals, societies and other associations of individuals, and representatives of legal persons, give full consideration to the interests, needs and rights of children. The Ombudsman for Children shall point to, and make proposals for, improvements in the children's lot wherever he/she considers this to be needed.

What falls outside the scope of the Ombudsman for Children?

The Ombudsman for Children does not deal with disputes between individuals. Nor does the Ombudsman for Children take up the cases of individual children of which the legislature has entrusted the solution to others, such as the public authorities, the courts of law or the Althing Ombudsman.

The Ombudsman for Children has, nevertheless, the obligation to provide the parties involved in such cases, and who seek his/her advice, with guidance as to courses open to them either in administration or the courts of law.

Who can turn to the Ombudsman for Children?

Everyone, children and adults, may apply to the Ombudsman for Children for all matters pertaining to children.

Conditions for a matter being taken up by the Ombudsman for Children

Matters may be put to the Ombudsman for Children either orally or in writing. Indications shall be well reasoned. The Ombudsman for Children will himself/herself decide whether an indication warrants his/her taking up of a matter. His/her decision on this is final.

The handling of a matter by the Ombudsman for Children

Where the Ombudsman for Children concludes that an indication gives rise to a further investigation of a matter he will seek information from the parties indicated. In order to be able to carry out his task the Ombudsman can demand from the authorities all the information he deems to be required, such as reports, documents, records and other items. Similarly, he can demand this kind of information from individuals, societies and other associations of individuals, and representatives of legal persons, where he deems that they have, through acts or omissions, infringed the rights, needs and interests of children in society.

The Ombudsman can, furthermore, summon the parties concerned, or go to see them in order to gather additional information and to have a closer look at some details. The Ombudsman has free access to all institutions which house children or deal with children in one way or another, whether publicly run or by individuals, societies or other associations of individuals.

The conclusion of a matter

The Ombudsman can conclude a matter by dismissing it with or without specific instructions, dropping it at any stage or following it through with observations, recommendations, instructions and proposals for a remedy. The Ombudsman can also conclude a matter by issuing a reasoned opinion.

Conclusions by the Ombudsman for Children in matters submitted for his/her consideration are not by law binding on the authorities, individuals, societies, other associations of individuals or representatives of legal persons. Those concerned are, however, expected to heed the observations, recommendations and proposals made by the Ombudsman for Children for improvements in the children's lot.
