

Network of Education Policy Centres

It all began with the assumption that a society that wants to be open and democratic needs an open and democratic education system. Moreover that the latter must be established and critically examined through independent evidence-based policy analysis that generates effective solutions for the problems that those societies face as they mature as a democracy.

The Network of Education Policy Centres (NEPC) was established in 2006. It is an international nongovernmental membership organization of education policy centres with 21 institutional members in 15 countries and 4 individual members.

The mission of NEPC is promoting flexible, participatory, evidence-based, transparent education policies reflecting open society values. This involves proactive policy initiatives, as well as advocacy and monitoring activities of governments and national education systems.

The network members and partners in charge of country implementation of the project are:
